When George Washington, who, though only twenty-five, had won renoun by his gallantry under Braddock, visited New York, he was the guest of Beverly Robinson, a young Virginian, who had come hither a few years previously and married an heiress. The latter (Jane Phillipse) owned a manor on the west side of the Hudson twenty wills in extent. This however, was but miles in extent. This, however, was but half of the paternal estate. On the east side of the river was a similar tract belonging to the other sister—Mary Phillipse. The last mentioned tract contained the Phillipse manor house, which is at present the City Hall of Yonkers. Mary Phillipse was at the time above mentioned, living with her sister, and was rendered, by wealth and personal attractions, one of the leading toasts of the day. Report says that Washington offered his hand to the washington onered his hand to the heiress, but was refused, as she did not care to bury herself on a Virginia plantation. Another suitor, Capt. Morris, of the British army, was more successful, and having won an opulent bride, he immediately constructed a mansion suitable to his new resition, as lard of the able to his new position as lord of the manor. Yonkers was too far from the site. Carpenters was too lat non the site. Carpenters were brought from England and the building was erected in a slow and solid manner, its date of completion being 1760. The lord of the manor lived here in grand style until the revolution, however, broke up their establishment. When Washington was expelled from New York he passed several days in this vicinity, during which the Morris House was headquarters. His old flame had taken refuge with some Tory families in the vicinity and her husband (now a Colonel) was in the British army. After the war both went to England, where Mary Morris died in 1820 at the age of four score. She always felt a deep interest in Washompletion being 1760. The lord of the like Mand Muller, she sometimes said to herself, "It night have been." After the revolution the entire manor was confiscated and the Morris property was confiscated and the Morris property was sold. Before this took place, however, Washington visited the place in company with some of his Cabinet, and a grand dinner was served by the tenant. They were deeply interested in the associations of that fearful some where one disaster after another awaited the patriotic army. The Morris estate afterward had several owners, and was at last purchased in 1810 by Stephen Jumel, a rotired French merchant, the price paid being $10,000. He died in a few years, leaving his wife sole owner, and this woman has given the place a notoriety far greater than its previous record. beautiful in early life, but in later years she displayed many vagaries, and as her years were prolonged to ninety they were marked by many of the weakness of old age. She and her husband had lived several years in Paris, where they gathered many curiosities which still adorn the ancient mansion. Visiting the place recently, I passed through an ancient gate and followed the road, which leads from the turnpike, till I reached the portice which, as has been reached the portice which, as has been remarked, has a grand prospect. On entrance one is struck with the breadth and dignity of the hall, which is rich in relice, both of furniture and art. Among the latter is a fine portrait of Madame Jumel with her family, and also a picture of Agron Burr, who became her second

Are Men's Heads Growing Smaller? Allow me to draw the attention of your Allowing to draw the attention of your readers to a statement which is certainly strange, if true. An opinion is preva-tent in the hat trade that the size of men's heads has undergone a decrease within the last thirly or forty years.

The following statement has been given to me by a batter whose name has attained a pre-eminence of a duration of attained a pre-emmence of a duranted of more than one generation. "Five and thirty years ago," he says, "when I was a young man, we used to purchase hats for retail trade in the following ratio: .91-21\/-22-22\/-23-23\/ ins.

Sizes. Relative "At the present time," he adds, "I am selling hats in this ratio:

.21—2114—22--2214—28--2314 ins. A manufacturer writes: "I should say that heads generally are two sizes less than at the time you refer to. A head of more than twenty-four inches in circumference is now quite a rarity, while we make thousands of hats for heads with a circumference of twenty-one inches." I have received similar statements from other members of the trade both wholesale and retail, and therefore feel no futher apology is required for bringing them under your notice. Accepting the statement quantum valeat, I have endeavored to ascertain whether I could find any explanation or confirma-tion thereof. I have not succeeded, and therefore, venture to ask information or opinions through your columns. The statement comes to me not only from men of intelligence and observation exercised beyond the limits of the shop or faolory; it is, I am informed, extensively believed among hatters; it may never-theless, be merely a general impression. The diminution, it is said, is observed mostly among grooms and men of that class in the social scale. If this is really the case the change should also be noticeable also among soldiers. The diminution is possibly more apparent than real, and may be traceable to the alteration in the style of hair-cutting, or of wearing the hat.—Letter to Nature.

The Northwest.

Throughout Illinois the climate has Throughout Illinois the climate has altered for the better with the development of the soil. Even the roads, which are notoriously bad in Illinois, are growing better. As to the capacity of the ground to produce wheat, corn, etc., nobody can begin to say when it will stop. The great State of the future for wheat is going to be Dakota. That Territory will become a great State. The power of the Northwest to produce a highly-energized people is probably not equaled on the globe. The elements that are filling it up are Irish, Germans and Scandinavians. They soon compound into a magnificent race, and the pound into a magnificent race, and the peculiarity of the climate is that it gives them active brains and bodies. The cold of the winters and the bracing air of the summers bring out all human power in a man. You see the race grow-ing in size almost under your eyes.—

CHICAGO, May 1.-Jay Gould reached this city this morning, after a trip of inspection covering 10,000 miles of road under his control. He pronounces the rumor that the Wabash is about to pass into the hands there, which has been one of the valuable property. He expresses great gratification at the outlook for crops and traffic in Illinois. Missouri, Texas, Kansas and Nebraska. He says the only thing the railroads of the west have to fear is unwise and adverse legislation. He does not anticipate a war of rates between the roads west of the Missouri river in consequence of the extension of his Missonri Pacific. He says he still favors the establishment of new stock yards at Chicago, and has pledged $500,000 for the work whenever it may be deemed advisable to put it in operation. Gould will remain in the city a couple of days.

MATOR'S ADDRESS. Mayor Waggoner then delivered the following address, which was ordered pub-Gentlemen of the City Council and Fel-

The city of Decatur having taken a new departure by reorganization, and the annual election for city officers having passed, I take pleasure in conformity to law and custom, in addressing you on the municipal events of the past year, and the policy that should guide us in the year we are now entering.

It is with a fitting sense of gratitude to the all wise ruler of the universe that I remind you of our fortunate escape from the perils of pestilence, tornadoes, floods, and conflagrations that have cast so deep a shadow upon many of our sister cities throughout the Union. To those members of the council who have just entered upon their duties in the management of municipal affairs, I extend an earnest assurance of my utmost endeavors to co-operate with them in all that goes to make up and advance the material interests of our city; and to those who have been associated with me in the past, I offer sincere thanks for their sid and counsel in our mutual labors during the year that has just closed. In this connection it may not be out of place to dwell for a moment upon the question of some of the officers "holding over," which has agitated the minds of our citizens during the heat of the late city election. It is but simple justice to say that upon this subject the organic law itself is so obscure and ambiguously drawn, as to have led the most eminent jurists of the state, in putting a construc-tion on it, to hold opinions diametrically opposite.

I deem it sufficient to say that my conduct, and that of my associates, in the premises, has been in accordance with the views advanced by competent legal coun-sel, with a desire to avoid expensive and useless litigation for the city, and I feel that I can safely rely upon the faith of my fellow citizens in the honesty of my motives, in the face of a record of twenty-five years of official life among them, open to the inspection of friend and fee to the inspection of friend and foe.

We now enter upon our duties as a new administration, and it is gratifying to an-nounce that financially we are in a good condition, not, perhaps, with as large a surplus in the treasury as one year ago, but with increased facilities for the extinction of our indebtedness. The decrease in the treasury is caused by the construction of the third ward sewer. which is a permanent improvement, and is a material progress in the direction of sewerage over former years. The drainage of the city is in a progressive state, and the health of the community keeps pace with it, adding one more to the countless demonstrations of the intimate relations existing between proper sewers and the sanitary condition of the city, the extension of which in every direction should be continued as rapidly as the finances will justify. The fire department remains as it has been in the past, an organization so distinguished in its entirety and individual make-up, for its usefulness and efficiency, as to render it a matter of pride to our city. In this connection I would call the attention of the council to the necessity of the enlargement of Neptune hose house No. 2; the present wants of the company require that this should not be delayed very long.

Our water works, owing to the increasing demand upon them, will be rendered more efficient by improvement and complete repair, as many of you are aware and have personal knowledge of the condition of the pumps at this time. I hope, therefore, that you will take prompt action in the matter, and have the necessary repairs made that will answer until a pump can be procured. It will not answer to wait until the present capacity of the old pumps is overtaxed. While they are in good repair they may furnish all the water now required, but the time will soon come when they will have to be used continuously and to their full capacity, and then cannot furnish the sample. and then cannot furnish the supply reand then cannot furnish the supply required by our citizens; therefore it seems to me the proper time to purchase and put in a new pump while the present are adequate to turnish our supply.

The police force is active and efficient, and under its management the lawless are summarily dealt with, and peace and good order maintained, and the property

f our citizens protected. The health department of the city has The health department of the city has been efficiently managed under the direction and supervision of Drs. Chenoweth, Bunstead and small. The presence of small-pox in our city at different times called for prompt and active measures, such as the erection of a pest house, the employment of a physician and nurses,—all of which was necessary in order to prevent the spread of the dreaded disease among our citizens, and which was attended with considerable expense to the tended with considerable expense to the city.
The public library is in competent

The public library is in competent hands, steadily increasing in size, and its good influence is felt throughout the city by an ever-increasing number of readers. On the occasion corresponding with this last year I made, as is customary at such times, some suggestions in relation to drainage, water mains and sidewalks. So far I have seen no reason to change the opinion then expressed, that our sys-tem of digging, hauling and putting down gravel is only useful as a preliminary process, and that the sidewalks in the main portion of the city to be laid with brick. A moment's reflection will disclose the advantage of putting down plank walks two or three feet in width in the suburbs where the buildings are jet scattering in the matter of convenience and expense over the present system of a six-foot wide gravel walk.

I still believe that there is a standing menace of destruction by fire in the absence of a double water main to the river. I am aware that in the affairs of cities as in those of men, perfection is by persistent efforts only to be approached and seldom reached. I would call your attention to the ne-cessity of the revision of our ordinances adopted under the old charter and the passage of such new ones as the extend-ed jurisdiction conferred by our new organization requires. We must not lose sight of our manufacturing interests, and Hwould suggest that in the future we use all proper means to foster and encourage manufactories. may be bought at our very doors by our farmers.

The bond of Harvey W. Downing for And now, gentlemen, in conclusion, in our first effort in carrying on the affairs of our city for the coming year let us bring unity of action to the task. Of course perfection in all things that add to the comfort, convenience, peace and security of a people associated together in large numbers under a city government, as in all things, is impossible. The most that can be done is to try and lessen evils which naturally surround a munici-pal body, and to that purpose let us lend our best efforts for the well-being and adancement of the entire city.

The mayor then named the following standing committees:

ohn Hockinberry Once More Behind the Bars in the County Jail.

This morning Constable Samuel Weitel arrested notorious John Hockinberry on a state warrant, charging him with threatening to make a deadly assault on Virgil Devore, a resident of the southvest part of the city. The prisoner had a hearing before Justice Lowry, and was committed to the county jail in default of bonds in the sum of $300 for his appearance to await the action of the May grand jury which will assemble for business next Monday.

It appears that on Sunday last John had a revolver and was firing it off near Devore's residence; that he caused such a disturbance that Devore remonstrated by telling John to put up his pistol and go away; but instead of complying with this reasonable request, Devore avers that John raised the loaded pistol, pointed it at him (Devore) and with an oath threatened to blow his brains out. Then Devore went away in a hurry, and now John is in jail again, with a fair chance of going up the road once more.
